

"Naughty Jesus!"
This Week At Judson Sunday School
(10/30/09)

Hey everybody, it's time once again for our annual

JUDSON SUNDAY SCHOOL HALLOWEEN PARTY!!!!!!

And have we got a party planned for your children this year! Not-too-scary stories, fun games, monster cupcakes and two, yes, two movies!

First, Saw VI - Preschooler's Revenge! Who knew there were six of these things? But not to worry! In this version, all the instruments of torture, including the saw, are furnished by Melissa and Doug's Children's Tool Kit. The saw is wooden, the pliers are plastic, and the hammer has a rubber head, so there's no blood! While there is pain involved, it's mostly of the headache kind from watching little children trying to drive square pegs into round holes.

For our second film, we are honored to have Willem Dafoe dropping by to discuss the children's version of his new controversial film Antichrist, called Naughty Jesus. Oh, the troubles that little scamp gets into! The New York Times calls it, "Cloudy With A Chance of Meatballs meets Yentl!" Stay tuned afterwards as Mr. Dafoe discusses just what the heck he was thinking when he made Antichrist.

There is a slight chance the movies will not be here in time for our party. In that case we'll just go with wrapping Rachel and Alex in toilet paper until they look like mummies.

Happy Halloween, Judson Sunday Schoolers!

Andy
Grand Inquisitor of Poohdom